Kiran Nagarkar is one of the significant voices in the fiction of contemporary South Asia. He is a bilingual writer whose first book in Marathi, Saat Sakkam Trechalis (Seven Sixes Are Forty Three) is credited to be one of the two novels that initiated the turn towards modern fiction in Marathi literature. He has written three other novels: Ravan and Eddie, Cuckold (which won the 2001 Sahitya Akademi Award in India), and God's Little Soldier, which depicts the process of radicalization in the youth of modern-day India.
